

EndoSketch

Design and build real things from basic geometric shapes, order parts, and assemble—all via an app anyone can use.

What's the problem?

Designing and building structures is a complex process.

Building things is hard. Designing them is even harder. It takes years to become proficient at these disciplines in order to create simple and functional structures and every project requires countless hours and iterations before becoming something people can use.